Re: Green Home Remodeling Case Studies

Dear Green Homeowner/Remodeling Professional:

The Rutgers Center for Green Building, housed at the E.J. Bloustein School of Planning and Public Policy, promotes green building through research, education and outreach programs. We realize how helpful it is for people to see examples of successful green home remodeling. As such, we have been soliciting examples from green homeowner and remodeling professionals.

We would like permission to feature your project as a case study. By providing us with the information on the Case Study Submission Form, you authorize us to feature the project on a section of the Center's webpage devoted to green home remodeling, in future versions of the New Jersey Green Home Remodeling Guidelines and/or in articles on green home remodeling that the Center authors in order to disseminate best practices. Professionals, photographers, and homeowners who contribute case studies will be credited appropriately and you will (see below) have the opportunity to approve the content prior to publication.

Please fill out and return the Case Study Submission Form and return it to us with the signed Case Study Permission Form. The materials can be emailed to mhaus@rci.rutgers.edu, faxed to (732) 932-0934, or mailed to the address listed above. You can email any "before" and "after" photographs, illustrations or other images that highlight your green remodeling strategies. We ask that you coordinate permission to use any third-party images or materials associated with your case study. Please indicate the appropriate credit and/or copyright notices that should be printed with this material.

Thank you for your work, we look forward to your submittals and to continuing to work with you as we encourage green building and remodeling throughout New Jersey.

Sincerely,

Jennifer A. Senick
Executive Director
Rutgers Center for Green Building
